Unity of invention in the light of PCT, EAPC and Russian Law

Sergey Kalachev, Deputy Head of the Chemical & Life Sciences Department at Gorodissky & Partners, reviews the differing regulations of the PCT, Eurasian and Russian law to provide an overview of which tends best to which type of application.

The Patent Cooperation Treaty (PCT) is a mechanism designed, for obtaining legal protection for inventions in many countries, a most convenient, economical and efficient way. According to Article 92(1) of the PCT, in national law shall require compliance with requirements relating to the form or content of international applications. The regulation of unity of invention is like a background system, the requirements of which are met by the PCT. The requirements of unity of invention's specificity, which satisfy in technical and legal differences between the claimant inventors make it so necessary of corresponding special technical features. The expression "technical and legal differences" reflects the requirement that the invention must have a certain degree of independence in order to meet the requirements of unity.

The requirements of unity of invention, the unity of the description of the invention, which is required in the case of the PCT, are defined in Article 92 (1) of the PCT. In addition, the requirement of unity of the invention is to be met by the PCT, which is defined in Article 92 (1) of the PCT. According to the Russian patent regulations, the unity of the invention is to be met by the PCT, which is defined in Article 92 (1) of the PCT. According to the Russian patent regulations, the unity of the invention is to be met by the PCT, which is defined in Article 92 (1) of the PCT. According to the Russian patent regulations, the unity of the invention is to be met by the PCT, which is defined in Article 92 (1) of the PCT.

RECENT DEVELOPMENTS IN REGULATION OF ON-LINE ADVERTISING IN RUSSIA

The Russian advertising regulatory landscape has seen significant developments over the recent months, following introduction of new requirements for on-line advertising. Starting from September 01, 2022 new Article 16.1 of the Federal Law of July 25, 2006 No. 138-FZ became effective. Under this legislative novelty, new compliance obligations for advertising participants arose.

LAW AND DRAFT LAWS

ADDITIONAL GROUND FOR CHALLENGING A PATENT RELATIVE TO A MEDICAL PRODUCT, PHARMACEUTICAL SUBSTANCE, OR AGRICULTURAL CHEMICAL.

On October 7, 2022, the law introduced in Article 12.11 of Part 3 of the Civil Code No. 159-FZ was amended. Clause 2 of Article 12.11 of the Civil Code provides for the conditions for the patent examination for an invention related to a medical product, pharmaceutical, or agrochemical, as well as grants additional patent for an amended period.

The adopted law provides for the introduction of an additional period of 5 years for challenge of the patent examination and for challenging the effect of the additional period against new civil suit. In accordance with the new version of Clause 1 of Article 12.11 of the Civil Code, the patent examination and the corresponding additional patent may be invalidated in cases of violation of the conditions provided for in Clause 2 of Article 12.11 of the Civil Code. An additional period granted by the patent may be challenged by filing an appeal with the Patent Chamber. During the state extended validity period, an appeal may be filed by any person, and after
